Scientific proof of survival after death has existed for over a century. The Campaign for Philosophical Freedom is working to increase public awareness of the existence of scientific proof that we all survive the death of our physical bodies - irrespective of religious beliefs.

If you cannot answer the following questions then please read on:

- How did the universe begin and why is it so huge?
- Why are there countless billions of galaxies?
- Why was a single one apparently not enough?
- Why does the universe exist at all?
- How was it created?
- What really is matter and what really are the four forces of nature?
- What is this mysterious Dark Energy?
- How does Dark Energy cause an ever-accelerating expansion of the universe?
- What is Dark Matter?
- Does life fit into the picture as an essential driving force?
- Can a physical theory support the evidence for the survival of death?

A paradigm-shifting physics developed from over 20 years of research provides answers to all these questions and many more by what we now call the BIG BREED theory.

Ron Pearson

This is described in a new book: CREATION SOLVED?

The solutions described are simple to imagine and understand, even though mathematically based.

The answers arose as spin-off from a successful attempt to solve two major problems in physics. The solutions are unique, since no others, worldwide, have yet appeared. These solutions were first published in 1991 and 1994 by the Russian Academy of Science, followed by one in 1997 in the peer-reviewed scientific journal Frontier Perspectives. They have subsequently been published in other scientific journals.

Strangely cosmologists still search for solutions. Why again?

The Big Bang theory of creation makes three hopelessly wrong predictions, by which it is totally falsified. In 1987 I found logical errors were responsible. These provided the trigger leading to the search for a viable alternative solution. Difficulties increased when it was also found that Einstein's theories of relativity could not be fitted into any theory dependent on the existence of any background medium - like the old ether or the modern "Dark Energy".

So before the creation problem could be addressed, an alternative to relativity had to be derived. The result matched all the data equally well. However, this ECM theory is free from the internal contradiction and incompatibility with quantum theory from which relativity suffers.

These constitute the two main problems whose solutions are described in the book. The end result shows Dark Energy to have a self-organising structure similar to the neural networks of our brains. Chaos itself produces the organisation until a conscious intelligence evolves. This then creates the universe using waves as numbers. In this way the weird and unreal nature of the quantum world is explained.

Across all scientific disciplines the survival of consciousness after death of the body has been and is still being denied. All the overwhelming evidence showing this attitude is wrong is ridiculed and discredited.

WHY?

The basic reason is that the disciplines of physics and cosmology are unable to fit such matters into their theories. However, physicists at their Solvay conference in 2005 admitted they had run up against the buffers. They require a new lead to kick-start the paradigm-shift that has been overdue for so long. Until this happens the obscurants like Wiseman and French will continue to discredit the evidence for survival because establishment physicists see it as a threat.

The BIG BREED theory provides answers to the problems that have thrown physics onto false tracks and shows that the obscurants are wrong.

Thousands of books describe what should be convincing evidence, yet most people remain in a state of total disbelief. Some try hard to accept religious teaching about the existence of soul, but still remain unconvinced.

Why is this?

The main reason is the established attitude of scientists like Richard Dawkins. Like most other scientists he thinks scientific advance has discredited the possibility.

If you think CREATION SOLVED? could help trigger the transformation of attitudes, then you could help by passing on this information to anyone you know, especially to engineers, cosmologists and physicists.

This pamphlet suggests that misconceptions in classical mechanics are responsible for blocking progress in physics. Refinements are described which spill over into quantum theory and appear to provide answers to vexed questions. For example, it leads to alternatives to both special and general relativity which match the achievements of both. Unlike relativity, however, the new solution is fully quantum-compatible, being consistent with the concept of the quantum vacuum.

 Dr. Susan Blackmore on the National News! [Posted: August 27, 2007]

BBC1 - National News at 10pm (August 23, 2007)

Dr. Susan Blackmore, billed as a former parapsychologist, gave the impression that all research into out-of-body experiences can now cease, it's all over, the definitive experiment has now taken place, proving that there is no question of a separate mind and brain, that we can forget all about surviving the death of our physical bodies, the whole thing is mere brain function.

A reporter was fitted with a virtual reality device on his head with a camera pointed at his back. The reporter said that he got the impression that he was out of his body and looking at himself from behind.

The staggering thing was that no real expert on out-of-body experiences was allowed to balance this outrageous propaganda. The summing up at the end left people with the impression that this is it, the experts have spoken.

Dr. Susan Blackmore has now left the building because she is no longer interested in the subject.

At least a balance is allowed whenever the subject of religion is discussed. The priests present their case, and now at last, the atheists, lead by Professor Richard Dawkins, present the case against religion. However, nothing like this happens on mainstream media and educational outlets whenever life after death crops up. The public only has access to one scientific expert opinion - that the mind dies with the brain - as presented by Dr. Susan Blackmore, together with professors Wiseman and French.

Michael Roll

E-mail from Michael Roll to Dr Sam Parnia, University of Southampton

Why was there no balance allowed on this BBC news item, your expert opinion regarding out of body experiences? This of course is a rhetorical question because the scientific work that you and Dr. Peter Fenwick are doing is much too close to the truth for comfort.

If the continuation of consciousness and the mind at a time when the clinical criteria of death have been met and the brain has ceased functioning can be proven through large scale, reproducible scientific studies, then this will have huge implications for society.

It would indicate that the mind/consciousness may be a scientific entity, which is as of yet undiscovered, but which is not produced by the brain and is hence a separate entity from it.

Conceptually this may be rather similar to the discovery of electromagnetic phenomenon in the 19th century or Quantum processes which could not have been reduced down to the science of their time, however they do exist and were eventually discovered many years after they were first proposed.

Not only do we now know that they exist but we currently use them in our daily lives for example when we watch television, or use the microwave oven. It may be that in the same manner, we cannot reduce mind/consciousness down to chemical processes occurring in the brain.

If proven it would also mean that the age-old philosophical concept of the 'soul' may be the same as the more modern concepts of mind/consciousness and it is this that appears to remain after death.

May 18, 2006 ("Dan Brown has resurrected a heresy that rattles the Church"), had the courage to blow the whistle on the great Christian hoax on the human race. To check this fact that the Christian priests are praying nobody finds out about, look up "Nicene Creed".

At last people are beginning to realise just how badly they are being deceived by their leaders and teachers. It's a pity that it has taken terrible tragedies like 9/11 and 7/7 in order to force journalists, academics, and politicians to tell the truth. If they had done this in 1794 when Thomas Paine published his masterpiece 'The Age of Reason' then millions would not have perished as a result of divisive religious hatred.

The Curse of Ignorance by Arthur Findlay (1947), published in two volumes, and details of some of Findlay's other works.

This is the true history of mankind, totally different to the pack of lies taught in a country where the Church and state are established. This passage sums up just how badly the British people have been deceived:

"Such, however, is still [the Church's] influence that this book, which tells the story of the past honestly and fearlessly, will be kept out of our schools and universities by the authorities, and consequently, only in later life will those with enquiring minds discover the truth."

Findlay finishes with a call to the people of the world to throw off the shackles of priestcraft, to make a choice between two paths:

"One is the Secular way (non religious) and the other is the Theological (religious); one is the Democratic and the other the Despotic; one is the sane and the other the insane."

Michael Roll was introduced to the study of life after death as a branch of physics (natural forces in the universe) by his mother. Therefore, right from birth he never associated surviving death with religion - or with divisive religious hatred.

His website www.cfpf.org.uk presents the secular scientific case for survival after death. These scientific discoveries are not available on mainstream media and educational outlets for obvious reasons:

The priests, mullahs, rabbis and "Holy" men will lose their lucrative monopoly on the vast life after death industry.

It will become clear that orthodox scientific teaching starts from the false base, across every discipline, that the mind and brain are the same - that death is the end of everything. There is no room for a so-called "spirit world" in the current scientific model of the universe.

We have had the experimental scientific proof that we all survive the death of our physical bodies ever since Sir William Crookes, who went on to be the President of The Royal Society, published the results of his experiments with a materialisation medium in The Quarterly Journal of Science in 1874 - repeatable experiments under laboratory conditions. These revolutionary experiments lacked the impact they should have had because subatomic physics (the study of the invisible part of the universe) was in its infancy.

We now have the mathematical theory that Sir William Crookes lacked. Also we have improved on the Crookes experiments with a contemporary materialisation medium. We have physically reunited recently deceased people with their friends and relations who are still on Earth.

Religion and Politics - A Perceived Monopoly on God, on Truth...

In an interview on UK ITV1's Parkinson programme on Saturday, March 4, 2006, Prime Minister Tony Blair said that his decision to go to war in Iraq would ultimately be judged by God.

Many people have protested about his remarks. Some people have expressed respect for Blair for his having a "moral code".

What we are witnessing here is the unfolding of the First World War all over again: Politicians and the military are once again getting mixed up with religious fanatics. This time round, instead of the Balkans, it's the Middle East.

And all the fighting is over nothing whatsoever.

Are the majority of people at last beginning to realise that the lunatics are still running the asylum?

(...) it has raised a very old and very thorny question over the role of religion in politics.

Supporters, such as MP Steven Pound, have pointed out the prime minister is no longer facing election and was simply telling the truth about his personal beliefs.

The other side of that coin is the suggestion from others that the prime minister did not "do God" previously because he feared it might damage him in the polls.

Mr Blair's faith has never been a secret, indeed there have long been suggestions that he may have pursued a career in the church as easily as in politics.

And his passion for ending poverty in Africa is regularly seen as an example of his faith at work.

But the British people have long appeared cautious, if not downright suspicious, of politicians who claim to be motivated by faith.

Clearly many will insist this is nobody's business but the prime minister's and that there are many positives for a leader who has a moral code.

But it is surprising that Mr Blair has chosen to raise the issue at this point in his prime ministerial career.

Horizon (BBC2 TV - Thursday, February 9, 2006) - The missing 96% of the universe: the so-called spirit world

Most of Our Universe Is Missing

Horizon discovers that 96% of the universe is missing. Only a tiny 4% of the universe is made of stuff we understand. Some scientists claim they know what the rest is, but others insist that nothing's missing at all, and that the real problem is far, far worse. They say that Newton, gravity and science itself is wrong, and needs to be re-written.

Dark matter, dark energy and variable gravity are put under the spotlight, as the world's leading cosmologists attempt to explain the biggest problem in science today.

From the BBC Message Board:

To Peter Leonard who wrote and directed this Horizon programme about the missing 96% of the universe.

Please have a look at the article 'The Mode of Future Existence' on my website: www.cfpf.org.uk

This was written by Sir Oliver Lodge in 1933, one year after the discovery of the subatomic particle called the neutron, the subatomic glue that locks the positive protons together in the nucleus of the atom. Lodge knew all about the invisible forces in the universe because he was the first person to send a radio signal. There is a plaque to commemorate this at Oxford University on the very spot where it took place. A photograph of this is on my website.

The same thing is happening at the macroscopic level. The quantum energy of the vacuum (The ether) is doing the same thing as the neutron is doing at the microscopic level. Keeping all the stars in a galaxy from flying apart.

Sir Oliver Lodge says the ether is in fact what the religionists call the "spirit" world. We have had the experimental proof that the so-called spirit world exists ever since 1874 when Sir William Crookes published the results of his experiments in the Quarterly Journal of Science. This has since been repeated by international teams of scientists and by lay people to the point of boredom.

What we have been waiting for and what has been missing is a mathematical theory to back up such revolutionary scientific experiments. We now have what the pioneers of subatomic phenomena lacked. Refer to the Society for Psychical Research. The Paranormal Review:

 Sir William Crookes Physically Reunited With His "Dead" Wife

[Posted: February 5, 2006]

Sir William Crookes eventually received the crushing scientific proof of survival after death during the First World War

Ref: "Crookes and the Spirit World" (Souvenir Press) 1972.
Material introduced and edited by M.R. Barrington, M.A. (Oxon)

The main thing that was missing from Sir William Crookes' early experiments with the materialisation medium Florence Cook (Published in the Quarterly Journal of Science in 1874) was that he could not carry out the same scientific exercise that Alan Cleaver did in 1982 with the materialisation medium Rita Goold - unite the person who was materialising at his repeatable experiments under laboratory conditions with her relations. This is because the "dead" person who materialised, Katie King, had left Earth and passed to the normally invisible part of the universe so long ago that nobody on Earth could confirm her identity.

Therefore Crookes was unable to confirm in the 1870s that he had the definitive proof that we all survive the death of our physical bodies and that all scientific calculations must now take into account the discovery of what religionists refer to as the spirit world.

However, this changed during the First World War when Sir William travelled to Crewe and during an experiment with the direct voice medium, William Hope, he was photographed together with his "dead" wife! This is what Crookes said in a letter to Sir Oliver Lodge on 22 December 1916,

"I am glad to say the possession of this definite proof of survival has done my heart much good."

The definitive scientific proof of survival that Sir William had worked so hard to achieve came after this photographic evidence that his beloved wife had indeed survived the death of her physical body when she fully materialised at his final experiments that were held in his own laboratory in London. Account of a Materialisation given by Miss F.R. Scatcherd in "Survival" (Putnam 1924). Miss Scatcherd knew Mrs Crookes when she was on Earth. "Meanwhile a lively conversation was in progress between Sir William and the spirit of his late wife."

This book, "Crookes and the Spirit World" ends with a letter from Sir William to Miss Scatcherd dated 11 May 1917. The Editor makes the following comment:

[This handwritten letter is preserved in the College of Psychic Studies. Also there is a framed copy of the Crewe circle photograph of Crookes and "spirit" of his dead wife, with slip pasted underneath typed by Crookes and signed by him, reading:
"Presented to the Ghost Club at the request of my Wife, speaking in the direct voice after her entry into Spirit Life. William Crookes."]

 Recommended UK TV Broadcast: Channel 4 - The Root of All Evil? [Posted: January 7, 2006]

Professor Richard Dawkins, Charles Simonyi Professor of Public

Understanding of Science at Oxford and world-renowned evolutionary biologist, blows the whistle on the great religious hoax on the human race. In this two-part series on UK's Channel 4 TV, Dawkins describes God as the most unpleasant fictional character of all and launches a wholehearted attack on religion as the cause for much of the pain and suffering in the world.

In a world in which religious conflict and bigotry are increasingly centre-stage, Dawkins believes that for the good of humanity, religion needs to be challenged and dismissed. In the first film, Dawkins confronts the march of militant religious belief across the world. In the American "Bible Belt", he meets Ted Haggard, the President of the American National Association of Evangelicals, who believes that science will one day prove the Bible's Creation story right. In Jerusalem, where the terrible certainties of faith began and still rage, Dawkins challenges the Grand Mufti of Palestine and discusses with Yousef Al Khattab, a Jewish settler turned Muslim fundamentalist, the implacable hatreds that faith has thrown up in this blighted city. The 21st century, Dawkins argues, should be an age of reason, but we are threatened by those who see unreason as a positive virtue. Faith is an indulgence of irrationality that is nourishing extremism, division and terror.

This is how the fantasy runs: a city the size of Brighton is now only ever referred to as a "militants' stronghold" or "insurgents' redoubt". The city is being "softened up" with precision attacks from the air. Pacifying Falluja has become the key to stabilising the country ahead of the January elections. The "final assault" is imminent, in which the foreigners who have infiltrated the almost deserted Iraqi city with their extremist Islam will be "cleared", "rooted out" or "crushed". Or, as one marine put it: "We will win the hearts and minds of Falluja by ridding the city of insurgents. We're doing that by patrolling the streets and killing the enemy."

 A Fair Balance in SPR Publications [Posted: November 29, 2005]

To Professor John Poynton: President of the Society for Psychical Research

John,

I have been thinking very carefully about the points you have been making about the SPR, that members are made up of people with different opinions: that the SPR does not have a corporate opinion.

However, you do stress that the editors of your publications will always have the final say about what becomes public knowledge.

This gives incredible power to those SPR members who end up as editors, especially as there are two schools of scientific thought about what so-called psychic phenomena is. Those who follow the path taken by Crookes and Lodge that we all survive the death of our physical bodies: that the study of survival must be approached via the scientific discipline of subatomic physics, the study of forces that are beyond our five physical senses - a separate mind and brain, and those who are adamantly opposed to Crookes and Lodge who have taken the orthodox scientific path that the mind and brain are the same, that death is the end of everything.

Surely in a situation as divided as this, rules should be made that all editors must be duty bound to always balance these two conflicting opinions, especially as I have proved to you that scientists within The Royal Society are relying on their colleagues within the SPR to keep a sharp look out for any important discoveries in what Sir Oliver Lodge called "Psychic Science"?

Having editors who are all-powerful makes the SPR vulnerable to what Angus Huck calls infiltration from "fifth columnists" who are determined to keep the religious and scientific status quo intact - the priests' monopoly on the lucrative life after death industry and orthodox scientific teaching across every discipline blindly following Einstein and Hawking down the road to oblivion.

This infiltration of the SPR by obscurants who are out to block the supporters of Crookes and Lodge is personified by dualists like Dr. John Beloff, who was Editor of the SPR Journal for nearly 20 years, and his protégé, Professor Robert Morris, who held the Arthur Koestler chair at Edinburgh University. I wrote to the American psychologist Morris in 1985 pointing out that his students' reading list was a joke and that he has gone against everything his benefactor Arthur Koestler stood for - linking survival with physics not psychology, especially "parapsychology".

Dr. John Beloff in a letter to me dated 12 July 1983 called me "plum crazy" for following Crookes and Lodge, that "post-mortem entities" might consist of finer subatomic particles than those that make up our physical universe. This is the monist approach that the mind and brain are as one all the time the physical body is functioning. The separation only takes place when the physical body packs in, but most of all, that the source of all energy is coming from the invisible part of the universe and not the Vatican's, the religionists, big bang at a single point in time which is also the great sacred cow of scientific teaching across the world.

It's taken all this time, from the death of Sir Oliver Lodge in 1940, for the dualists, who are fighting to keep religion separate from scientific endeavour, to be pushed aside and for the monists' case to be published in the SPR magazine The Paranormal Review. This is thanks solely to the Editor Dr. Nicola Holt doing the correct thing and allowing a balance.

However, the secular scientific case for survival after death is still being officially censored from the SPR Journal as I write this - Ronald Pearson's scientific paper "Survival Physics" backing the revolutionary experiments that were carried out by Sir William Crookes with a materialisation medium in 1874. This is when he discovered people, who once lived on Earth, but who were still very much alive and now living in a universe that is normally out of range of our five physical senses.

This is a crazy situation because Ronald Pearson's papers have been peer-refereed by physicists and published across the world, in Russia, the USA and now India "A Paradigm-Shifting Physics Supports Immortality". His censored discoveries in physics are now being read by millions of people who have access to a computer and tune into radio programmes like Jeff Rense in the USA and Barry Eaton in Australia: www.cfpf.org.uk

Please make a move to balance the two scientific opinions because one of them is desperately wrong - survival or oblivion?

Monism gives a rational explanation for all the "ghost" stories down through the centuries, people on Earth catching glimpses of people in the invisible part of the universe. It also explains why our ancestors, who knew nothing about subatomic physics, invented all the dangerous and divisive religions in the first place. They understandably thought that they were witnessing something that was "supernatural".

In the 21st century we now know that nothing is supernatural, above or beyond the laws of nature. If something happens then there must be a rational scientific explanation to account for what we are witnessing:

"I anticipate that the future of psychical research lies with revolutions in the physical sciences, not with psychology."

 Subatomic Physics: The Study of the Invisible Part of the Universe [Posted: November 19, 2005]

To Lord May of Oxford: President of The Royal Society

Subatomic Physics: The Study of the Invisible Part of the Universe

Dr. Jonathan Miller has just completed his outstanding BBC television series exposing the great religious hoax on the human race that is tearing the world apart. However, he made the usual terrible mistake of connecting the study of life after death with divisive religious hatred. Miller is just as much a victim of the propoganda put out by the obscurants as everybody else.

With the benefit of hindsight it's now obvious that we should have taken the same scientific path that the former President of The Royal Society took in the 1870's - Sir William Crookes linked the study of life after death with the scientific discipline of subatomic physics, the study of the invisible part of the universe. Please refer to the article written by that other distinguished member of The Royal Society, Sir Oliver Lodge, "The Mode of Future Existence", that he published in 1933. This is on my website: www.cfpf.org.uk - The Campaign for Philosophical Freedom

Please also be kind enough to refer to the letter I received from the Executive Secretary of The Royal Society dated 17 August 1984. It's in the Correspondence section in date order. You will see that Dr. R.W.J. Keay refers me to the Society for Psychical Research. It's now most urgent that The Royal Society abandons the 17th century pact it has with the Christian priests, mentioned by Dr. Keay, never to make a serious scientific effort to discover the so-called spirit world - not to "meddle in divinity and metaphysics."

The Society for Psychical Research has at last published my paper "A Rational Scientific Explanation For So-Called Psychic Phenomena" in their magazine "The Paranormal Review", October 2004. They have now just published Ronald Pearson's paper "Survival Physics" that provides the missing scientific backup for Sir William Crookes' experimental discovery of people in the invisible part of the universe that our ancestors mistook for angels, devils, gods or God, the creator of the universe himself! Pearson also solves the problem of the Cosmological Constant, the ever expanding universe. This replaces the Vatican's Big Bang at a single point in time.

Surely Ronald Pearson must now be in line for the Nobel Prize for Physics that should have been given to the pioneers of subatomic physics, Sir William Crookes and Sir Oliver Lodge? I can't think of anything more important than the scientific discovery of the so-called next world because it affects every person on Earth. We are all going to die and we have all lost loved ones.

Ronald Pearson started his scientific investigation from the correct base, making everything match the results of the experiments that Sir William Crookes published in The Quarterly Journal of Science in 1874: repeatable experiments under laboratory conditions that were then repeated by other international teams of scientists.

"If your mathematical theory does not match the experiment, then it's wrong."

Professor Richard Feynman: Nobel Laureate for Physics

Einstein and Hawking's model of the universe does not match the experiment.

Marconi came forward and developed Sir Oliver Lodge's invention of wireless into the incredible communications revolution that we are now going through. It's now up to top scientists throughout the world to step forward and help Ronald Pearson to develop his scientific discoveries.

It's no good Rudolf Rigger, you can huff and puff as much as you like, it's too late to destroy Sir Oliver Lodge's model of the universe.

The secular scientific case for survival after death is hitting millions, not only via my website: www.cfpf.org.uk

Too many people across the world now know that Sir William Crookes discovered people living in the invisible part of the universe with repeatable experiments under laboratory conditions in 1874.

Because of the Internet the religionists and their powerful materialistic allies will not be able to censor (use the peer-referee tool) uncomfortable discoveries in physics any longer. On Wednesday 5th October at 4am I make my 10th worldwide radio broadcast with Jeff Rense - www.rense.com - This links up live with radio stations across the USA and the rest of the world on the Internet.

You obviously don't mind being fed a pack of lies by your teachers at school and university, but I do, and I have done something about it. There is no way those in receipt of the secular case for survival are going back to following the hatred that the priests are selling and orthodox scientific teaching that starts from Einstein's and Hawking's false base that death is the end of everything, especially now that we have the mathematical theory to backup the revolutionary experiments of Sir William Crookes and the other international teams of scientists who repeated his experiments - Prof. Charles Richet, Prof. Schrenck Notzing, Dr. Glen Hamilton and others. Those with computers are using the search engines and they quickly find out just how badly they are being fixed by obscurants with a great deal to lose from the truth.

There is a very good reason why the religionists and their powerful materialistic allies are fighting like tigers to destroy the secular scientific case for survival after death.

This is because whenever we speak to people who once lived on Earth and are now living in the normally invisible part of the universe, the message is always the same via mediums, it never varies:

"There is no place here just reserved for Christians or anybody else, we all survive the death of our physical bodies."

 Paine, Findlay, Crookes, Lodge [Posted: September 28, 2005]

To every person who supports the philosophers Thomas Paine and Arthur Findlay together with the scientists Sir William Crookes and Sir Oliver Lodge

Please help to balance this vicious attack from the materialists who up to now have never been challenged in front of millions. At last we are moving towards a level playing field.

BBC Points of View notice board - Science and the Séance broadcast on BBC2 on August 31, 2005

Thanks to this BBC notice board, for the first time ever, people are gaining access to both sides of the argument - rationalists against survival verses rationalists who support survival.

Because the scientific case for survival is a big threat to the priests and their powerful materialistic allies, this scientific backup for mediumship has been blocked from all mainstream media and educational outlets in the UK in order to keep the old-boy network intact from the wrath of public opinion.

As we are making a study of forces that are out of range of our five physical senses, we have to work with a machine that will bring into focus what we cannot normally see and sense.

There is nothing supernatural or paranormal about a microscope. It is a medium, a go-between, proving that just because we cannot see or sense something it does not mean that it does not exist. It is the same with radio and television sets. It is no good climbing on our roofs and trying to see the invisible forces hitting our aerials. We have to work with a machine, a medium, that can do the job.

In order to make contact with people in the invisible part of the universe we have to work with a very sophisticated machine indeed. Something far more complicated and advanced than anything invented by human beings - the human mind and brain. This is why we have to work with a materialisation medium in order to prove that we all possess a soul that separates from the dead physical body.

The expert in thermodynamics Ronald Pearson has the mathematical theory to support such exciting and revolutionary experiments. It is no surprise that his scientific discoveries are being censored in the UK, but thankfully not in Russia and the USA. Let's now knock the Vatican's Big Bang Theory for six. Reverse the expanding physical universe but not to a single point in time. Just put all the matter back into the invisible part of the universe, the "spirit" world, the source of all energy.

Michael Roll's mother had made a careful study of the work of the pioneers of radio and television - Sir William Crookes and Sir Oliver Lodge. Therefore right from birth he was reading the subject of life after death as a branch of physics - that we are dealing with natural and normal forces in the universe, the scientific discipline of subatomic physics, the study of the invisible part of the universe and the phenomena that it throws up.

Needless to say these discoveries in physics have been blocked from coming to the attention of the public for obvious reasons. The priests have a lucrative monopoly on the life after death industry and they are not going to give this up without putting up a fight. The scientific proof of survival after death makes the priests redundant. People used to worship the Sun until they found out what it was.

Then there is the other huge power block - orthodox scientific teaching across every discipline that starts from the same base, that death is the end of everything, the mind dies with the brain. Until the Internet got cracking, people only had access to what the priests were selling and powerful materialists like Einstein and Stephen Hawking were pumping into the minds of their peers and students.

Things have now changed dramatically. Millions of people now have instant access to what is still being censored from all mainstream media and educational outlets - the secular scientific case for survival after death without any connection whatsoever with divisive religious hatred.

What is being blocked is now all on one website: www.cpf.org.uk

Michael Roll and his webmaster Paul Read have kept well out of the "psychic jungle". The website is only presenting the experimental proof of survival after death and the mathematical backup for such revolutionary experiments. And of course, how and why these discoveries in physics are being blocked from even coming to the attention of the public.

Secular Case for Survival

To the Editor of The West Australian Newspaper

In the current climate of terrorism and religious squabbling, I would like to make the following information available to the readers of your newspaper. This information is not to persuade, convert nor preach to anyone. It is just to be made available to those who are interested and to be rejected by those who wish to retain their differing views on life and death.

For over 100 years we have had the experimental scientific proof that we all survive the death of our physical bodies, and that the living mind separates from the dead brain. Sir William Crookes, later to be awarded the Order of Merit and to hold the office of President of The Royal Society, carried out repeatable experiments under laboratory conditions. His results were published in The Quarterly Journal of Science in 1874. These experiments proving survival were subsequently repeated by international teams of scientists. One of the main reasons why this revolutionary discovery in physics failed to have the impact that it should have done is that these experiments lacked the mathematical theory to back up what was being observed.

Thanks to recent exciting discoveries in subatomic physics, the study of the invisible part of the universe, and the published work of UK Scientist, Ronald Pearson, we now have the missing mathematical theory that matches the pioneering experiments.

For any reader wishing to explore what is, and let's face it, the most important thing that we could discover in our lifetimes, then I can suggest 2 websites:

www.cfpf.org.uk and www.victorzammit.com

The problem we face is that these discoveries are not reaching the mainstream media. This information belongs to every man, woman and child on earth to either accept or reject as they choose.
